ILLINOIS MINE PEACE ASSURED

Closed Shop, Favored by Operators, Is Agreed to by the Men.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., April 15.—The joint scale committee of the Illinois miners and operators have reached an agreement on every issue, with the exception of the shot firers' question, and this is in the hands of a special committee of three, with every prospect of a compromise.

The miners have agreed to the closed shop of the operators.

The old scale, except for a few possible changes, has been agreed upon. The shot firers' question will be arbitrated.

The joint scale committee was in session until after 1 this afternoon. Everything seems to indicate that an agreement may be reached tomorrow and the coal miners resume in Illinois at once. The closed shop proposition is what the operators have been wanting for some years. It means that the miners refuse to work for an operator who does not belong to the Illinois Coal Operator's Association.

LATER.—Over 250,000 miners returned to work Monday. "Everything is lovely and the goose is hanging high."

HAYWOOD'S VIEWS.

Cause Interest Among Working Men—Letter From One on the Subject.

BELLEVILLE, Ind., April 17.—(Special).—William B. Haywood, of Colorado, who was arrested with Pettibone and Moyer for complicity in the murder of Governor Steunenburg, of Idaho, and kept in jail for 18 months before given a trial by a jury which acquitted them, made a visit to Belleville Sunday afternoon. Mr. Haywood was one of the head officials of the Western Federation, and is a firm Socialist, and so am I, for he made it so his views. He gave us a sketch of how the miners had been used in the western coal and metal fields through the strikes and how they had been put in jail for nothing in the last 30 years, and in most cases the state officials would give all the support to the big dog and send the militia to guard the mines so the men could not blow them up, when there was no danger at all. And how he and two others were arrested in Colorado and taken to Idaho to be tried for murder without the legal papers which the laws of the United States call for, and instead of the speedy, fair and impartial trial which the law requires, they were kept in jail a year and a half, and here the speaker landed on Teddy for his part in the play. The Western miners appealed for a writ of habeas corpus from the lowest court to the Supreme Court, but was turned down and then Teddy got in line. He wrote a letter to the "Golden West" and said the men were undesirable citizens, and the men had not been convicted when accused. Instead of the President seeing that they got a fair and impartial trial, he put his foot in and kicked them further down, but the innocent were freed, and now the low-lived cur of a detective, who did the crime, or at least is a self-confessed murderer of over six dozen men, including the governor of Idaho, is in jail with all hopes of being pardoned before the present governor goes out of office, and has good ground for hopes if all statements are true. Haywood then gave a few pointers on the late trouble in the gold field where the operators asked for the soldiers and they were sent. Then Congress forced Teddy to send a commission to investigate and see if the soldiers were needed. So the commission investigated. No public report was made as custom is in such cases, but some wise congressmen got in line while congress was in session and called for the report and the commissioner's report was made public, and was that no trouble was in Goldfield and the soldiers had no business to be sent in the first place, but the dirt was done, for as soon as the soldiers reached Goldfield the wages were cut from $5 to $1 per day. That may look big to some, but wait until I get through. Here are the prices of some of the necessities of life. Two rooms, 8x8 feet, $30 per month; $1 per ton for coal; 10c for a small pail of water. Besides that it is away out in the sandy hills where you could not see anything but sand. The establish-ment was high in proportion, so they did well to live after all.

President on the Socialist ticket. He is the man, for he is a common working man who always went down in the ground to earn his living until this charge and acquittal of murder made him the hero of the west. He does not use any big words, but just spits it out so all of us common people can understand it, and tells the capitalists plainly where they will be if the Socialist forces ever get in power. That is what I want to see, all on an equal footing. Let everybody have their just dues. I have just as much right for the luxuries of life as anyone else but I don't get them.

Of course I don't expect the Socialists to be in power for some time, but if this thing doesn't change now, it will some day. This so-called panic will make some Socialists. If any of the working men want to stay with the old party, don't go to hear Haywood speak, if you have a chance, for he will make you change your views.

Death Was On His Heels.

Jesse P. Morris, of Skippers, Va., had a close call in the spring of 1906. He says: "An attack of pneumonia left me so weak and with such a fearful cough that my friends declared consumption had me, and death was on my heels. Then I was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery. It helped me immediately, and after taking two and a half bottles I was a well man again. I found out that New Discovery is the best remedy for coughs and lung diseases in all the world." Sold under guarantee at Whitwell Drug Co's, 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

SUCCESSFUL PLAY.

WHITWELL, Tenn., April 18.—(Special).—The ladies of Whitwell presented the play "Female Masonic Lodge" at the schoolhouse Saturday night to a large and appreciative crowd. The net proceeds were $30, and the players were highly complimented for their good work.

TICKS AND LAW

The Relation of the Cattle Fever Tick to the Quarantine Laws.

The object of this article is to endeavor to clear up the many erroneous ideas that have gotten into circulation regarding the work of tick eradication in this county.

On account of the prevalence of the fever ticks in a part of this state the Government and State authorities have drawn a line through Tennessee, including less than half of the State, in the quarantined area. This they call the quarantine line and forbid the movement of cattle across this line, unless they are shipped for immediate slaughter. Such cattle shall only be shipped in cars labeled "Southern or Infected Cattle," and shall be kept in separate pens, to be killed within ten days.

As a result of these restrictions the cattle from below the line sell from $5.00 to $15.00 per head less than cattle from above the line, because the Southern cattle, as has just been explained, must be sold in a few days for beef only and cannot be sold in the open market for feeding or breeding purposes.

The census gives the average number of cattle for each county of this state as about 10,000, and if by raising the quarantine cattle here will bring only $5.00 a head more, it means that this county will be $50,000.00 richer just as soon as this is accomplished. About one-third of the cattle are sold each year. That will mean an annual income to the farmers and stock traders of about $16,000.00.

A few words about the ticks. Many persons do not know that there are different kinds of ticks. All ticks look alike to them. But there is a considerable and important difference in both the appearance and the damage that these ticks do.

The commonly termed wood or dog tick has been here for ages and no doubt will always be here, and it is not this tick that the authorities are trying to exterminate; but it is the Texas fever or Murrumbidgee tick which has only been here about twenty years and were brought here on Texas ponies and Alabama cattle, that they are after. It is a different shaped tick, than the wood or dog tick, and its life's history is also different.

The Texas Fever tick can only develop on cattle, horses and mules, and they have never been found on birds, dogs, squirrels, rabbits or other small animals. This has been proven by experiments. These fever ticks, when very small, crawl upon the cattle as they pass through the bushes and tall grass, and molt or shed their skin twice in two weeks, then they are sexually mature and insert their sucking apparatus into the hide of the cow brute and draw off its life blood that should go to make milk, fat and good beef; but instead keep the animal in a half starved condition, and when on milk cows cause them to give diminished milk supply. The term "scrub cattle" could hardly be known if it were not for these ticks.

After the mature female tick gets full of blood and eggs she drops off the cow and crawls along the ground, gets under a leaf or piece of wood, and lays from 1,500 to 3,000 eggs and then dies. These eggs hatch in from two to four weeks in warm weather, as minute little ticks, sometimes called "seed ticks," which crawl upon the blades of grass, bushes and fence posts, and wait for cattle to pass their way. They then grab on to the hair as the animal brushes by and begin their life's work.

The life of a tick in warm weather and under favorable conditions lasts about two months. It can readily be seen from this that there may be two or three generations of ticks in one season; so that one female mature in the spring may be the source of millions of ticks in the fall.

From this description it is plainly evident that this tick is different from the wood or dog tick, and it is upon these facts, which have been demonstrated over and over again, that the work of extermination of the fever ticks is based.

"Why is it cattle can have these ticks on them and not die, when they are called fever ticks?" is a question often asked. These Texas fever ticks inject into the blood circulation of the cow brute a germ which causes the fever in susceptible animals, just as the mosquito causes malaria or yellow fever in man. When these ticks get on a full grown cow brute that never had ticks before the cow soon dies, and this happens in from 50 to 75 per cent. of the cases. The reason you see cattle with ticks on them and not suffering from the fever is because these animals became infested with these ticks when they were calves, and they gave them an immunity; as calves are not very susceptible to the disease, on the same principle that measles and small pox seldom kill children, but both diseases are very fatal to adults.

The State and Government authorities say that if the people of a county will keep their cattle free of fever ticks for one season that they will release that county from the quarantine restrictions and the cattle can be sold in the open market at any time during the year. All the states below the quarantine line, which extends from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, are working to get rid of this pest and to remove the ban from the cattle industry. Each state has enacted laws to back up the authorities in their work of extermination.

It is under the laws of the State of Tennessee in co-operation with the laws of the United States' Government that the work in this county is being conducted.

The State and Government authorities have appointed men in this county as live stock inspectors, to carry on this work of extermination of the ticks, and the County Court has authorized the Board of Health to appoint County Live Stock Inspectors to co-operate with them, so that the county will get the benefit of this work and get out of quarantine in a much shorter time.

The authorities require that all the cattle in the County must be inspected frequently by these men and daily reports returned, so that they may know whether the cattle are being kept free of ticks and grazed. It is in order that the Inspector may see the cattle that the state authorities have issued rules and regulations requiring the cattle to be kept up in pastures as it is obviously impossible for the inspectors to find the cattle if they are running at large in the woods. This is being done with the ultimate object in view that the pastures and ranges will be free of infection at the end of the season.

If the people will work in harmony with the inspectors and observe their instructions and give them their hearty co-operation, by keeping their cattle grazed and free of ticks, all the restrictions can be raised after this year's work, and they will be given a free range and a free market for their cattle.

It is expected that the merchants are or soon will be ready to furnish the U. S. tick emulsion for eradicating cattle ticks. This preparation has been tested by the Government and found to be effective in killing ticks. It is cheaper and vastly superior to the black oil, in that it has no bad effects on the cattle. To use it should be mixed as follows: One gallon of the emulsion to two gallons of soft water.

Well, "More Anon," we infer from your writing that you are a Socialist. We have never given the subject any study. It may be a good thing for the people. We think we know you. If we are not mistaken we knew you at Jasper when you edited the Valley Herald. You said you were a whig, then a republican, my father was a whig and voted that ticket before the war, but there was something in the republican platform "he didn't like and voted after the war for the man he thought was for the most people. We have all made mistakes in voting for the party. The democratic party is one of the most rotten things in existence, but they are not responsible for the panic that has been on us at the present time, neither do we think the republican party is to blame for it. The people of Clifty are having an egg hunt today, but the panic has struck this town such a hard blow that if one was to come here they would have to hunt people.

A good many farmers have got cotton large enough to chop and as soon as the weather will permit they will finish planting.

Arch Gibson raised a great deal of excitement in this vicinity a few nights ago when returning home wearing Joe Linnerman's hat. He shot a hole through the crown and went to G. C. Hagan's and called up the city marshal in Will's Point and stated that some fellow had attempted his life. The marshal, together with the constable and a deputy sheriff, procured a blood hound and hastened to the scene. The hunt lasted the greater portion of the night. Not finding any hot trail, after repeated attempts, the officers returned to town. The next morning a couple of Gibson's neighbors examined the hat and found one bullet hole up through the top of the crown and also that the hat was powder burned from the inside. The same day Gibson vacated Vanzandt Co. on short notice. Bachelor.
